

STATE STATUTES
CURRENT THROUGH DECEMBER 2019

Access to Adoption Records

To find statute information for a particular State, go to <https://www.childwelfare.gov/topics/systemwide/laws-policies/state/>.

Although adoptive parents are provided nonidentifying background information about the child they plan to adopt, in nearly all States the privacy interests of adoptive parents, adoptive children, and birth families are protected by making all files related to the adoption process confidential and withheld from public access. To ensure that ongoing privacy needs are met, records of adoption court proceedings and the child's original certificate of birth are sealed after an adoption is finalized.

The need for information about the birth family does not always end when the adoption has been finalized. Persons who have been adopted may need to access information from the records to obtain updated medical history, while some adoptees seek identifying information about birth family members in order to contact their families of origin. For this publication, statutes were collected for all States, the District of Columbia, American States, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and Puerto Rico, and the results indicate that most States have instituted procedures by which parties to an adoption may obtain both nonidentifying and identifying information from an adoption record while still protecting the interests of all parties.

NONIDENTIFYING INFORMATION

Nonidentifying information includes the health, behavioral health, developmental, educational, and social histories of the child and the child's parents and other birth relatives. This type of information is provided to the adoptive parents at the time of the adoption.¹ Nonidentifying information may include the following:

- Date and place of the adoptee's birth
- Age of the birth parents and general physical description, such as eye and hair color
- Race, ethnicity, religion, and medical history of the birth parents
- Educational level of the birth parents and their occupations at the time of the adoption
- Reason for placing the child for adoption
- Existence of other children born to each birth parent

All States, American Samoa, Guam, and Puerto Rico have provisions in statutes that allow access to nonidentifying information by an adoptive parent or a guardian of a minor child who has been adopted. Nearly all States allow an adult adoptee to access nonidentifying information about birth relatives, generally upon written request. Usually, the adoptee must be at least age 18 before he or she may access this information.²

Approximately 26 States allow birth parents access to nonidentifying information, generally about the health and social history of the child.³ In addition, 15 States give such access to adult birth siblings.⁴ Policies on what information is collected and how that information is maintained and disclosed vary from State to State.

RESTRICTIONS ON RELEASE OF NONIDENTIFYING INFORMATION

Some jurisdictions are more restrictive about the release of information from adoption records. New York, Oklahoma, and Rhode Island require the person seeking nonidentifying information to register with the State adoption registry. In Pennsylvania, nonidentifying information is available through a registry or the court or agency that handled the adoption. Guam requires a party to petition the court before any information can be released.

¹ For more information about the types of information provided to adoptive parents prior to the child's adoption, see the Child Welfare Information Gateway publication Providing Adoptive Parents With Information About Adoptees and Their Birth Families at <https://www.childwelfare.gov/topics/systemwide/laws-policies/statutes/collection/>.

² Idaho, Nevada, and New Jersey provide nonidentifying medical and social information about the birth family to adopting parents at the time of placement but do not otherwise address the issue of access to nonidentifying information in statute.

⁴ Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, and Vermont

Nonidentifying information that is generally available includes medical and health information about the child and the child's birth family at the time of the adoptive placement. Alabama, Illinois, Kansas, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, and Wyoming statutes allow adoptive parents to request that the State adoption registry contact birth parents when additional health information is medically necessary. In Georgia, any medical information about the birth family that is received by the department or child-placing agency must be provided to the adoptive parents or adult adoptee.

IDENTIFYING INFORMATION

Identifying information is information from the disclosure of adoption records or elsewhere that may lead to the positive identification of birth parents, the adult adoptee, or other birth relatives.⁵ Identifying information may include current or past names of the person, addresses, employment, or other similar records or information. Statutes in nearly all States permit the release of identifying information when the person whose information is sought has consented to the release.⁶ If consent is not on file with the appropriate entity, the information may not be released without a court order documenting good cause to release the information. A person seeking a court order must be able to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that there is a compelling reason for disclosure that outweighs maintaining the confidentiality of a party to an adoption.⁷

Access to information is not always restricted to birth parents and adoptees. Approximately 37 States allow birth siblings of the adoptee to seek and release identifying information upon mutual consent.⁸

Some States have imposed limitations on the release of identifying information. Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Texas require the adopted person to undergo counseling about the process and potential implications of search and contact with his or her birth family before any information is disclosed. In Connecticut, release of identifying information is prohibited if the department or child-placing agency that possesses the information determines that the requested information would be "seriously disruptive to or endanger the physical or emotional health of the person whose identity is being requested."⁹

⁵ Adoptive parents of adult adoptees are generally not permitted access to identifying information about the adoptees' birth families. There are exceptions to this. For example, in California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Washington, an adoptive parent may apply for or consent to the release of identifying information on behalf of an adoptee who is still a minor. These provisions also do not apply when, prior to finalization of the adoption, the birth and adoptive parents agreed to postadoption contact. For more information on this, see the Child Welfare Information Gateway publication, Postadoption Contact Agreements Between Birth and Adoptive Families, at <https://www.childwelfare.gov/topics/systemwide/laws-policies/statutes/cooperative/>.

⁷ A compelling reason might include, for example, a serious medical condition requiring a blood relative or genetic link, or access to medical records.

⁸ Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, and Wyoming

⁹ See Connecticut Gen. Stat. § 45a-751.

MUTUAL CONSENT REGISTRIES

A mutual consent registry is one method many States use to arrange the consents that are required for release of identifying information. A mutual consent registry is a means for individuals directly involved in adoptions to indicate their willingness or unwillingness to have their identifying information disclosed. Approximately 30 States and Puerto Rico have established some form of a mutual consent registry.¹⁰

Procedures for mutual consent registries vary significantly from State to State. Most registries require consent of at least one birth parent and an adoptee over the age of 18 or 21, or of adoptive parents if the adoptee is a minor, in order to release identifying information. Most States that have registries require the parties seeking to exchange information to file affidavits consenting to the release of their personal information. However, eight States will release information from the registry upon request, unless the affected party has filed an affidavit requesting nondisclosure.¹¹

OTHER METHODS OF OBTAINING CONSENT

States that have not established registries may use alternative methods for disclosing identifying information. Search and consent procedures authorize a public or private agency to assist a party in locating birth family members to determine if they consent to the release of information. Some States have a search and consent procedure called a confidential intermediary system.¹² With this system, an individual called a confidential intermediary is certified by the court to have access to sealed adoption records for the purpose of conducting a search for birth family members to obtain their consent for contact. Other States use an affidavit system through which birth family members can either file their consent to release identifying information or to register their refusal to be contacted or to release identifying information.¹³ The written permission may be referred to as a consent, waiver, or authorization form.

¹⁰ Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, and West Virginia

¹³ Alabama, Alaska, California, Georgia, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin

ACCESS TO AN ORIGINAL BIRTH CERTIFICATE

When an adoption is finalized, a new birth certificate for the child is customarily issued to the adoptive parents. The original birth certificate is then sealed and kept confidential by the State registrar of vital records. In the past, nearly all States required adoptees to obtain a court order to gain access to their original birth certificates. In approximately 20 States, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, and Guam, a court order is still required.¹⁴ In Massachusetts, however, evidence of a parent's willingness to provide information about her identity to the adoptee shall be considered sufficient for granting an order to release the information contained in the original birth certificate. In many States, the laws are changing to allow easier access to these records. Some of the means for providing information access include the following:

- Through a court order when all parties have consented¹⁵
- At the request of the adult adoptee¹⁶
- At the request of the adoptee, unless the birth parent has filed an affidavit denying release of confidential records¹⁷

¹⁴ Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Montana (for adoptions finalized on or after 10/1/1985 and before 10/1/1997), Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, West Virginia, and Wyoming

¹⁵ Idaho, Mississippi, and the Northern Mariana Islands

¹⁷ Colorado (effective 1/1/2016), Delaware, Illinois (for adopted persons born on or after 1/1/1946), Maryland (for adoptions finalized on or after 1/1/2000), Minnesota (for adoptions finalized on or after 8/1/1997), Montana (for adoptions finalized on or after 10/1/1997), Nebraska (for adoptions finalized on or after 7/20/2002), Ohio (for adoptions finalized after 1996), Oklahoma (for adoptions finalized on or after 11/1/1997 when there are no birth siblings under age 18 who have been adopted), and Washington

¹⁸ Indiana (for adoptions finalized after 12/31/1993), Michigan, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, and Virginia

¹⁹ Missouri, Nebraska (for adoptions finalized on or after 9/1/1998), South Carolina, Utah (for adoptions finalized on or after 1/1/2016), and Wisconsin

- When eligibility to receive identifying information has been established with a State adoption registry¹⁸
- When consents from the birth parents to release identifying information are on file¹⁹

Access to Original Birth Certificate

Citation: Rev. Stat. § 19-5-305

The option on the contact preference form that allows a birth parent to authorize or not authorize the release of the original birth certificate to eligible parties expires on January 1, 2016. On and after January 1, 2016, contact preference forms shall only address a birth parent's preferences regarding contact and to submit or update medical history. On and after July 1, 2014, the State registrar shall post a notice on its website stating that the contact preference form will be revised to eliminate that option and that birth parents may exercise this option prior to January 1, 2016.

Prior to allowing access to an original birth certificate, the State registrar must search for a contact preference form executed prior to January 1, 2016, to ascertain if either birth parent had stated a preference authorizing or not authorizing the release of the original birth certificate. If both birth parents have filed a contact preference form executed prior to January 1, 2016, authorizing the release of the original birth certificate, then the State registrar must release the original birth certificate to the eligible party. If there is no contact preference form on file, or if a contact preference form executed prior to January 1, 2016, is on file stating that the original birth certificate not be released, then the State registrar may not release the original birth certificate prior to January 1, 2016, unless the birth parent rescinds the contact preference form; upon mutual consent of two or more reunited parties; the birth parent is deceased; or the eligible party obtains a court order pursuant to § 19-1-309. When one birth parent has authorized the release of the birth certificate and the other birth parent has filed a contact preference form, prior to January 1, 2016, not authorizing release, the State registrar shall issue the original birth certificate to the eligible party with the name of the nonconsenting parent redacted.

The court may, upon petition of an adult adoptee or birth parent, for good cause shown, appoint an intermediary or a licensed child-placing agency to contact a birth parent or adult adoptee, as applicable, who has not registered with the adoption registry pursuant to § 63.165, and advise them of both the availability of the intermediary or agency and that the birth parent or adult adoptee, as applicable, wishes to establish contact.

Access to Nonidentifying Information

Citation: Ann. Code § 19-8-23

When certain information would assist in the provision of medical care, a medical emergency, or medical diagnosis or treatment, a party to the adoption; child; legal guardian; health-care agent of an adoptee; or a provider of medical services to a party to the adoption, child, legal guardian, or health-care agent may request that the Department of Human Services or child-placing agency access its own records on finalized adoptions for the purpose of adding subsequently obtained medical information or releasing nonidentifying medical and health history information contained in its records pertaining to an adopted person, the biological parents, or relatives of the biological parents of the adopted person.

When the State Adoption Unit of the department or a child-placing agency receives documented medical information relevant to an adoptee, the department or child-placing agency shall use reasonable efforts to contact the adoptive parents of the adoptee if the adoptee is younger than age 18, or the adoptee if he or she is age 18 or older, and provide the documented medical information to the adoptive parents or the adoptee.

Upon the written request of an adoptee age 18 or older or an adoptive parent on behalf of an adoptee, nonidentifying information shall be released regarding the birth parents and the adoptee's birth, including the date and place of the adoptee's birth and the genetic, social, and health history of the birth parents.

Mutual Access to Identifying Information

Citation: Ann. Code § 19-8-23

Upon written request of an adoptee age 18 or older, the department or child-placing agency shall release to the adoptee the name of the adoptee's birth parent, together with a detailed summary of all information the department or agency has concerning the adoptee's birth, foster care, placement for adoption, and finalization of the adoption, if the following apply:

- The birth parent has submitted unrevoked written permission to release his or her name to the adoptee.
- The identity of the birth parent submitting permission has been verified by the department or agency.
- The department or agency has the records that have been requested.

If a birth parent has not filed an unrevoked written permission, the department or agency shall, within 6 months of receipt of the written request, make a diligent effort to notify each birth parent, by personal and confidential contact, that a request for information has been made. The birth parent may then file an affidavit consenting or objecting to disclosure.

The adoptee also may petition the court to seek the release of information. The court shall grant the petition if it finds that failure to release the identity of each parent would have an adverse impact upon the physical, mental, or emotional health of the adopted person.

Birth parents and adult birth siblings also may access information about an adoptee using the same procedure. If the adoptee is deceased and leaves a child, such child, upon reaching age 18, may seek the name and other identifying information concerning his or her grandparents in the same manner as the deceased adoptee and subject to the same procedures.

The State Adoption Unit within the department shall maintain a registry for the recording of requests by adoptees for the name of any birth parent, the written consent or the written objections of any birth parent to the release of that parent's identity to an adoptee, and for nonidentifying information regarding any birth parent.

Agencies shall provide assistance and counseling services when the adoptive parents, birth parents, or adoptee who is age 19 or older requests current information. The agency shall contact the other adult persons or the adoptive parents of a minor child in a personal and confidential manner to determine whether there is a desire to share information or to have contact. The agency shall provide services to adult genetic siblings if there is no known violation of the confidentiality of a birth parent or if the birth parent gives written consent. The adoptee also must be advised of other siblings who were adopted or relinquished to the commissioner but not adopted.

In adoptive placements made on and after August 1, 1982, the agency shall obtain from the birth parents an affidavit attesting to the following:

- Notwithstanding the filing of an affidavit, the adoptee may petition the court for release of identifying information about a birth parent.

- Any objection filed by the birth parent shall become invalid when withdrawn by the birth parent or when the birth parent dies.

Upon receipt of a death record for the birth parent, the agency shall release the identifying information to the adoptee if requested.

If the department is unable to notify a parent identified on the original birth record within 6 months, and if neither parent has at any time filed an unrevoked consent to disclosure, the information may be disclosed as follows:

- If the person was adopted prior to August 1, 1977, he or she may petition the court for disclosure, and the court shall grant the petition if, after consideration of the interests of all known persons involved, the court determines that disclosure of the information would be of greater benefit than nondisclosure.
- If the person was adopted on or after August 1, 1977, the commissioner shall release the information to the adoptee.

If either birth parent has ever filed with the commissioner an unrevoked affidavit stating that the information on the original birth record should not be disclosed, the commissioner shall not disclose the information until the affidavit is revoked by the filing of a consent to disclosure by that parent.

If a parent named on the original birth record has died, and at any time prior to the death the parent has filed an unrevoked affidavit stating that the information not be disclosed, the adoptee may petition the court of original jurisdiction of the adoption proceeding for disclosure.

The State registrar shall provide a copy of an adoptee's original birth record to an authorized representative of a federally recognized American Indian Tribe for the sole purpose of determining the adoptee's eligibility for enrollment or membership in the Tribe.

Access to Original Birth Certificate

Citation: Pub. Health Law § 4138-e

Effective January 15, 2020: The legislature hereby states its intention to acknowledge, support, and encourage the life-long health and well-being needs of persons who have been and will be adopted in this State. The legislature further recognizes that the denial of access to accurate and complete medical and self-identifying data of any adoptee, knowingly withheld by others, may result in such person succumbing to preventable disease, premature death, or otherwise unhealthy life, is a violation of that person's human rights. As such, the provisions of this section seek to establish considerations under the law for adoptee's equal to such considerations permitted by law to all nonadopted persons. This section does so while providing for the privacy of an adopted person and his or her birth family.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the commissioner or a local registrar, upon application, proof of identity, and payment of a nominal fee, shall issue certified copies of original birth certificates, including any change attached to that certificate by a birth parent or parents, and any information provided to the commissioner or a local registrar pursuant to § 114(1) of the domestic relations law, to (i) an adoptee, if age 18 or more; or (ii) if the adoptee is deceased, the adoptee's direct-line descendants; or (iii) the lawful representatives of an adoptee or a deceased adoptee's direct-line descendants, as the case may be.

When it is impossible for the commissioner or a local registrar to provide a copy of an adult adoptee's original birth certificate, the true and correct information about the adoptee and the adoptee's birth parents, including their identifying information, that would have appeared on the original birth certificate shall be provided to (i) an adoptee, if age 18 or more; or (ii) if the adoptee is deceased, the adoptee's direct-line descendants; or (iii) the lawful representatives of an adoptee or a deceased adoptee's direct-line descendants, as the case may be, by any authorized agency.

The Department of Family and Protective Services, licensed child-placing agency, or other person placing the child for adoption shall edit the records and information to protect the identity of the birth parents and any other person whose identity is confidential. For adoptions finalized after October 1, 1993, the Department of Health shall provide a noncertified copy of the original birth certificate, upon request, to an adoptee who is age 18 or older, unless the birth parent has filed an affidavit of nondisclosure before July 28, 2013, or a contact preference form that indicates he or she does not want the original birth certificate released, provided that the affidavit of nondisclosure, the contact preference form, or both have not expired.

Access to Nonidentifying Information

Citation: Ann. Code § 48-23-601

Prior to placement for adoption, the agency shall compile and provide to the prospective adoptive parents a detailed written health history and genetic and social history of the child. These histories must exclude information that would identify birth parents or members of a birth parent's family.

Records containing such nonidentifying information shall be retained by the clerk of the court for 99 years and shall be available upon request, together with any additional nonidentifying information that may have been added on health or genetic and social history, to any person listed above.

Mutual Access to Identifying Information

Citation: Ann. Code §§ 48-23-501 through 48-23-504; 48-22-702

The adult adoptee and each birth parent may register by submitting an affidavit to the registry. The failure of any person to file with the registry for any reason, including death or disability, precludes the disclosure of identifying information to those persons who do register.

Upon registering, the registrant must participate in no less than 1 hour of counseling with a social worker.

In any case where the identity of the birth father was unknown to the birth mother, or one or both birth parents are deceased, this information shall be shared with the adult adoptee. In these cases, the adoptee will not be able to obtain identifying information through the registry.

The affidavit must include, if known, the following:

- The current name and address and any previous name by which the person was known
- The child's original and adopted names
- The place and date of the child's birth
- The name and address of the agency that placed the child

The administrator of the registry shall process each affidavit in an attempt to match the adoptee and the birth parents. There is a match when the adult adoptee and the birth parent have each registered and received the required counseling. When a match has taken place, the department shall directly notify all parties through a direct and confidential contact.

If an adoptee or a parent of a minor adoptee cannot obtain identifying information by use of the registry, identifying information may be sought by petitioning the court. If the court is unable to obtain consent from either of the birth parents, the court may release identifying information to the adoptee if at a hearing the court finds there is evidence of compelling medical or other good cause for release of such identifying information.

Whenever any person listed above wishes to obtain medical and genetic information about a birth parent who consented to his or her child's adoption before February 1, 1982, and the information is not on file with the Department of Children and Families or licensed child welfare agency, the person may request that the department or agency conduct a search for the birth parents to obtain the information.

Any person age 18 or older whose birth parent's rights have been terminated in this State or who has been adopted in this State with the consent of his or her birth parent or parents before February 1, 1982, may request the department or agency to provide the person with any available information regarding the identity and location of his or her birth parents. The requested information may be disclosed if the department or agency has on file unrevoked affidavits from both birth parents, or if one of the birth parents was unknown and the known birth parent has filed an unrevoked affidavit.

If the department or agency does not have on file an affidavit from each known birth parent, it shall, within 3 months after the date of the original request, search for each birth parent who has not filed an affidavit. If the birth parent is contacted and files an affidavit, the department shall disclose the requested information. If the birth parent does not file the affidavit, the department may not disclose the information. If, after a search, a known birth parent cannot be located, the department may disclose the requested information if the other birth parent has filed an unrevoked affidavit.

If a birth parent is known to be dead, the department or agency, in addition to any available information regarding the identity and location of the birth parents, shall provide the requester with any nonidentifying social history information about the deceased parent on file with the department or agency.

Any person age 18 or older whose birth parent's rights have been terminated in this State or who has been adopted in this State with the consent of his or her birth parent or parents before February 1, 1982, may file with the department or agency an affidavit authorizing the department or agency to provide the person's birth parent with any available information about the identity and location of the person. An affidavit filed under this subsection may be revoked at any time by notifying the department or agency in writing.

Any birth parent whose rights have been terminated in this State at any time, or who has consented to the adoption of his or her child in this State before February 1, 1982, may request the department or agency to provide him or her with any available information about the identity and location of any person age 18 or older who was or may have been his or her child. Before acting on the request, the department or agency shall require the requester to provide adequate identification.

If the department or agency has on file an unrevoked affidavit filed by a person age 18 or older who was or may have been a child of the requester, the department or agency shall disclose the information requested related to the person who filed the affidavit. In disclosing information, the department or agency may not disclose any information that would reveal the identity or location of a birth parent other than the birth parent requesting the information.

The requester may petition the court to order the release of any information that may not be disclosed under this section.
